

Young Gardener of the year

Our gardening club has had great success this year with Hannah Buckton reaching the finals of the Royal Horticultural Society's Young Gardener of the year.

This competition is a nationwide competition and the highest recognition that the RHS awards to school pupils. RHS recognises the best young gardeners in the UK today and are committed to continue nurturing and celebrating young talent and reaching out to young people to help them to develop a lifelong love of gardening.

As a finalist Hannah was invited to attend the RHS Flower show which took place at Hampton Court Palace in July and met with HRH The Duchess of Cornwall who presented the awards to the winners.

Hannah has worked hard all year in Mrs Wakley's gardening club and when Joy and Mrs Wakley heard about the competition they immediately thought of nominating Hannah. Hannah enjoys every aspect of gardening and has shown real commitment by never missing a club and helping out with environmental community projects which the school has been involved in.

Part of the requirements for finalists was to produce a short film of themselves carrying out certain tasks
